

Excerpt from Peters Letters to His Kinsfolk I must not attempt to deny, that there are some things in these Letters which are not exactly what I should have judged proper for your Lordships eye; but your Lordship is aware that they were written without the smallest notion of being printed. I hope the effect of the whole correspondence may be agreeable to you, and I well know the gentle and forgiving nature of your disposition. Above all, I should be highly flattered to learn that the account I have given of the State of Religion in Scotland, had interested and pleased you.
