

Born Southern and Restless (Emerging Writers in Creative Nonfiction)

An engaging personal narrative about growing up in the South and leaving that region to explore a larger world. The first generation of her family to attend college, Kat Meads breaks with long-time family tradition and leaves her agrarian roots to wander rootless: around the country. Birds gotta fly, fish gotta swim, and I gotta ramble, she writes in the books opening essay. These essays give us a writer who is able to take us along as she lives in various places and supports herself through various odd jobs -- as a potato grader, an artists model, a secretary, a part-time college instructor. She gives us a wealth of interesting characters -- her father, grandmother, neighbours and relatives, people she meets during her wandering.
