

Alchemy: Writers on Truth, Lies and Fiction

Reality versus fiction is at the heart of the current literary debate. We live in a world of docu-drama, the real life story. Works of art, novels, films, are frequently bolstered by reference to the autobiography of the creator, or to underlying fact. Where does that leave the imagination? And who gets to define the parameters of reality and fiction anyway? Five writers debate the limits of materialism and realism, in art and literature - and offer a passionate defence of the alchemical imagination in a fact-based world.
