

Moments: A Novella and Short Stories 1992-2001

Jaded by a failed marriage and long unemployment, a former depot stocker learns news that may resurrect his long-vacant town. His first love has reappeared, however, with new possibilities... News of a former professors death causes a field archeologist to recall their final meeting, the professors less-than-picturesque ancestral home, and a beautiful painting... Amid concerns over her daughter, her husbands co-workers and her looks, a wife and mother receives support from the women of her apartment community... A photographer seeks to restore his cancer survivor wifes self-image, at the same time recapturing a lost photo of her upon a special chair...

Inspired by the everyday, the moving, the brief, but always remarkable instances too special to ignore, author B.T. James offers his first collection of short works: MOMENTS: A NOVELLA AND SHORT STORIES. BT JAMES acquired two skills early on that would serve him well in the writing abilities he would soon discover. A restrictive environment growing up in Lebanon, PA often demanded him to sit quietly, so he occupied himself observing what was around him. Anyone who knew him back then, however, would also call attention (some concerned but mostly appreciative) to his vivid imagination.

Mr. James was inspired to write PORTRAIT OF AN EGYPTIAN WOMAN in 1989. When family issues caused him to exchange journalism and radio for more predictable work, he concentrated on his own fiction, completing RETRO SUIT (1995) and THE NAPOLEON CHAIR (1996). CONVENIENT ACCESS ROAD (2001) was the most challenging of the four works from two standpoints: literary (first novella) and circumstantial (two widely geographical moves, two drastic employment changes and his fathers death). He lives in Harrisburg, PA with his
