

The Write Lover

Jasmine is a mother of two who is married to her high school sweetheart, Eric. She wants nothing more than the full support of her husband with her writing endeavors but his controlling ways, have her reconsidering her dreams of becoming a best selling author and wondering if she should end her marriage. Darius is also a married upcoming author who would abandon his dream of becoming an international author if his wife Chandra would bear him a child but her plans don't include any children or his literary goals. These two talented writers met by chance at a book fair in New York City. From that meeting they spawned a collaboration that would take the literary community by storm and develop a love affair that could have been written for a romance movie script. Will the two reach their dreams of a multi million dollar book deal or will their personal hurdles have them walking away from it all?
